Articles worksheets for grade 4 with answers

Content Content Articles are used to indicate the number of unique nouns (a, an) and to determine which noun is called (the). And they are indefinite articles. They are used to designate a unique countable noun in general or for the first time. Basic English grammar rules can be tricky. In this article, we will advise you on the basics of sentence structure, punctuation, speech parts, and more. Exercises on articles for class 4 CBSE with PDF answers There are two types of articles: definitive article (the) and vague articles (a, an). Usually we use a vague article 'a' or 'an', first mention some person or thing. By that we don't have to be clear about which particular person or thing we mean. When we refer to the same person or thing again, we use a certain article to indicate a person or thing that has already been mentioned. There are times when we don't have to use any of the articles. Such a situation is called zero article, A and An are used to introduce a noun. We use A and An to talk about one person, animal or thing. We use 'A' when the first letter of the noun is a conpro conprove. We use 'An' when the first letter of a noun is a vo vo vo vouche. It is used before special nouns. We use 'A' in front of you and the EU when they sound like 'Y'. Examples: uniform, eucalyptus, etc. We use 'An' before silent 'h'. Examples: Honorable, hour, etc. It is also used before the noun that was mentioned, introduced or discussed earlier. A and A are an indefinite article, but 'The' is the definitive article. We use superlatives before. Example: Mt. Everest is the highest peak. We use before Ordinals, names of rivers, lakes, oceans and mountains, names of holy books and newspapers, names of buildings and monuments. Examples: First, Himalayas, Pacific, Tribune, Ramayana, White House, USA Articles Exercises for Class 4 with PDF A Answers. Illustrated explanations and exercises are great evaluation activities so you can feel comfortable with these basic words in English. We use them all the time, so it's very important that you know how to use them properly! First, be sure to check the page that explains the articles. Remember, we use and/an for nouns that we mentioned for the first time or that are not specific. We use for specific things. Check out the examples below to remember how we use definitive and vague articles. Then complete the exercises and check your answers at the end of the worksheets. Examples: We use A/an/Vy for nouns that are not specific when we can refer to any of certain things. Imagine, for example, that your uncle was just making cookies. You say, I want a cookie! (You want any of the cookies you made, not a specific cookie. So, you can use a.) The word cookie starts with a convex sound, so we use it. If the word starts with a vouche sound, we use it. For example: A scientist had an idea. (We don't know anything about the idea, so it's not specific. The word idea starts with a vo vo vo voual sound, so we use it.) We use specific nouns when we know exactly which things we're talking about. We use nouns for unique or plural. For example: Jack fell asleep in a green chair. (We know exactly which particular chair we're talking about.) Eric and Adam dye eggs. (We know exactly which specific eggs we're talking about.) We also use when the one of the Thing. For example: The sun shines today! (There's only one sun.) Vs. A/an For the first time we mention something in the story we use and/an. Then we'll use it. For example: Anna told Rick a secret. The secret was a big surprise! Rick later told Angela. (We use the first time we mention secrets. After that, we use it because we know exactly which particular secret we're talking about.) No Article Remember that in some cases, we don't use an article. When we talk about something in general, or when we mention a city or country, we don't use the article. For example: Parties are a lot of fun! (Parties in general are fun.) I was in Australia last year. (Australia is a country, so we don't use the article.) So, that's how we use and/an, and in English. Now, let's practice! Exercise A: A or an? Look at the pictures, then fill in the sentences with or an.1. Bradley gave his teacher _____ apple.2. Holds _____ pencil.3. Emily is in _____ garden.4.
